THE NORWAY ADVERTISER

(OXFORD COUNTY, ME.)

NORWAY, ME. - FRIDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1925.

Norway Firemen's Ball

Nearly five hundred dancers were on the floor at Norway Opera House, Tuesday evening, when the Norway Firemen's Relief Association staged one of the most successful carnivals ever given by the department.

The hall decorations were purposely omitted this year, but an unusually large amount of carnival fixings were provided and used with lavish handsomeness.

This was an informal affair with a number of contra dances before intermission to entertain older people not up to the so called modern dances of the last part of the evening was devoted to fancy dances with fox trots predominating.

Howard Shaw of South Paris was promoter and kept the sets moving in time to the old fashioned contra music.

The balloon waltz created considerable amusement. A bologna shaped balloon was tied to the ankle of each lady, the last two couples succeeding in keeping the balloon from exploding was to receive prizes. Through a misunderstanding the couples failed to take seats when the balloons burst, the winners could not be determined.

Probably the carnival one-step caused the most sport for balcony spectators. Signed prominently in the mix-up. Paper hats and noise makers were distributed to the dancers and some less than a truck load of confetti and streamers was tossed around the balcony. At 11:15 the time this avalanche was unloaded upon the crowd beneath until the dancers whirled in a perfect web of paper and clouds of confetti.

Carl Smith's Novelty Orchestra, six pieces of Rumford, furnished music during the evening. Refreshments were served at several places outside the hall. Dancers were present from Rumford, Auburn, Lewiston, Oxford, Waterville, Bridgton, South Paris and from other more or less adjacent.

Homer B. Lusk was floor manager and was assisted by J. H. Harvey, Alex. W. Lusselle, Charles Huff, Harold A. Anderson, Howard Shaw, Fred Shaw, and others.

One of the most successful grape falls was held at their hall on Oct. 23. In the early morning the work of decorating the hall was begun.

"Know Maine" in mind, everything was arranged to carry out that thought. On the walls were pine boughs and both U. S. and State of Maine flags in evidence. The tables were covered with white, tastily decorated with sprigs of pine and greenery, with the placard "Welcome to Maine" at the center front.

At 6:45 the dining hall was opened. Every chair was filled and each and all did justice to the fine chicken pie supper that the ladies, served with Emma Swan, as chairman.

At 8 o'clock the upper hall was filled to hear the State of Maine program as follows:

Tallieu, State Seal with original poem. Song, Maine (singing). Double Trio, Maine (singing). Marion Haskell, violin. Marion Haskell, piano.

BOWLING

Oxford Bears 1361; Norway Lions 1331. The Bears from Oxford bearded the Norway Lions in their den at Parlin's Alley, Monday evening, with the result of carrying home the spoils of 30 pins.

Through a misunderstanding the Bears made a surprise visit and there were no Lions waiting for the battle. Paul Boynton, chief he-Lion was notified and assembled to meet the invaders and the scrap went merrily on.

In the first string the emergency lions led by one pin and gained two more in the second. The Oxford Bears fell down hard in the third string, but the Lions either winced or overconfident, tumbled into quicksand and all but disappeared, leaving the Bears looking in with 35 pins left for that session.

Henry Vancouver, a new Lion, corralled in the emergency, bowled the highest single at 112. Heslop of the Bears made second with 100 for the highest single. Heslop and Henderson tied things up with 94-4 as the highest average. Burgess and Norway were third with an average of 90-4 each. Henderson registered first with 284 for three string total. Heslop led behind that with one pin.

They have another jungle hunt next Monday evening.

Chapman-Moore

Alexander Hamilton Chapman of New York City and Norway, and Miss Frances Elizabeth Moore of Norway were united in marriage Saturday evening, Oct. 24.

The ceremony was performed at the Christ Episcopal Church, Norway, by the Father Arthur Langlois of Christ Church.

The church was decorated with evergreens and lightly lighted with long, white tapers, on the altar were flowers of Mrs. H. W. Walker Brown, Miss Ruth Akers and Miss Marion Haskell.

The bride was attired in golden brown velvet, chignon with harmonized shoes and hat and carried a bouquet of violets and orchids. She was attended by Mrs. H. W. Walker Brown, who was groomed in brown broadie chiffon and carried chrysanthemums. The best man was Thomas Houston.

The bride's father, Fred L. Moore, gave her in marriage. The ceremony, in the form of Episcopal service was officiated by the Rev. Arthur Langlois.

Miss Ruth Akers at the organ and Miss Marion Haskell, violinist, rendered the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, while during the service DeKoven's "O Promise Me" was played.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held in the church. As a host of friends waited outside to show them with courtesy as they left the church for an auto trip to Gilead. After November first they will be at home to friends at the "Eyre" in Mason.

The bridegroom's gift to his bride was the bridegroom's gift to his bride was a German police dog, the gift to the mother of honor was a handsome brooch and to the best man, cuff links.

GLENN MCINTIRE ATTENDED UNIVERSALIST CONVENTION

Glenn McIntire of Norway attended the Universalist Convention at Syracuse, N. Y., last week. He was one of the laymen speakers and discussed the subject of recruiting the church, with special reference to young men. Mr. McIntire would give young men in the church plenty of hard work intelligently executed. He is a huster in the Norway Universalist Church and prominent in found and some activities of the Young People's Christian Union, therefore qualified to express an opinion from a personal touch with young people.

He is quoted as follows: "You must see that it takes a great deal of thought to your service. The young man demands efficiency from other people. It is not necessary to the church that it is necessary to have the music carefully planned."

"A prayer or sermon that goes on and on without a sign of ending or ending will not attract the young man. Do not preach at him or down to him, but to and for him. Our church needs to be warmed. I do not mean a moral reformation, but a spiritual comfort and sympathy. Bare intellectual reasoning will not fill the bill."

Norway High School

On Friday morning, October 16, Mr. Lord led a "Pop" meeting in the auditorium of the high school. Cheers were led by Etta Hadley, Clark Hutchins and Mr. Brown. After the student body had warmed up with a few cheers, Mr. Lord asked Philip Greenleaf to make some remarks in behalf of the football team. Philip responded and gave a speech on the school spirit. This met with applause.

The next speaker was Captain Rogers. While also cheering on the school spirit, he spoke of school spirit among those not on the team. He spoke of the small representation of students there was on the sidelines. Harry Walker, president of the student council, was the next one to represent those trying to inspire the boys and girls to back their teams to the finish. Coach Rogers gave a speech, commending the team on the good work they were doing and since "school spirit" seemed omnipresent, he asked the team to be present this morning, he added his voice to the cheering.

At the close of the meeting, the school song was sung, with Miss Reed as accompanist.

Dear Sir:
I feel safe in saying that my Perfection Oil Heater is the greatest standby.
We have had one for years, and use it all seasons of the year, when having company, to take the chill off any room, as one can carry it easily, anywhere.
Also, on extremely cold days we burn it in the cellar to keep apples and potatoes from freezing.
Many times I get lunch on it, if there are only one or two things to warm up, and no fire in the range. While eating, water is heating for dishes.
I also find it indispensable for popping corn.
I wouldn't part with my Heater for any price, if I couldn't replace it with another.

WEST STONEHAM

Gammon Family Reunion

A pleasant family reunion took place Oct. 4th, when the Gammon family and descendants gathered at the late Wm. Gammon farm, now known as Beechwood Farm, and owned by Mr. and Mrs. H. B. McKee, of North Lovell. Each brought their share of the lunch, and as the weather was cool, a table was spread indoors and dinner eaten buffet style, after which nearly all climbed the hill to "Sunset Rock", (so-called in late years by summer visitors) and looked over the spot where the farm building stood, the wharves, and viewed the lake and cottages on this upper shore. Before leaving, a group picture was taken, and it was decided to meet another year at the same place, but at an earlier part of the season.

Those present were, Harold Gammon, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bennett, and August Tracy, all of Paris; Ernest Gammon and son, Clayton, of Bryant's Pond; Merlene Hayden, Norway; Bertha Keniston, Holden Hall, Bethel, Mr. and Mrs. Z. H. McAllister, Mr. and Mrs. Byron McAllister and children, Orman, Ethel and Ian, of West Lovell, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. McKee and daughters, Hilda and Hester, Mrs. Lee Andrews and sons, Harry and Donald, W. W. Durgin, of North Lovell, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Grover and children, Douglas, Harriet and William, of West Stoneham.

Mrs. Enid Melrose has a man and his wife to assist her with the work at her farm.
Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Barker and son, Edmund, spent the day recently, with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Andrews while Mr. Barker helped Mr. Andrews butcher his hog.
Rose Stanley and daughter, Mildred, have returned from North Lovell, where Mrs. Stanley has been at work for her sister, Mrs. Charles Emery.
A. E. Oressey is at work for Willis Warren, in the woods.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Andrews were in Bridgton, shopping, recently.

WAS NOT FIT TO DO HER WORK

Dreadful Condition of Mrs. Fullerton's Health Remedied by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Clearfield, Pa.—"I cannot begin to tell you how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me in every way. Before taking it I couldn't stand on my feet without pains running all through my whole body from my waist down, just like threads pulling. I was not fit to do any work. My mother told me to try the Vegetable Compound and I have found great benefit, and I not only recommend it for such troubles, but to build up the whole system. I have used it the most every thing that gets wrong with me. When I begin to feel nervous and irritable I don't stop long in getting a bottle of the Vegetable Compound if I haven't got one in the house. It gives a fine appetite and makes a new woman of me. You may use this testimonial in my own town or anywhere else, and I will answer any letters I receive."—Mrs. RUSSELL FULLERTON, 525 S. 2nd Street, Clearfield, Pa.

If you are suffering from nervous troubles, irritability, give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. For sale by druggists everywhere.

NORWAY VICINITY

Mellie Dunham
Champion Fiddler
From the Boston Post—Whitings' Column, Under Date of Oct. 26

The drum may be, as an eminent authority from New York lately told Boston audience, the ancestor of all musical instrument; but the fiddle is more enduring.

There is a difference between the fiddle and the violin. The violin is for the elect. The fiddle is for all. At about the time the Boston audience was learning about the Kaffirs' interesting habit of eating a long howl while they were with their elbows against their ribs, drum-like, A. Mellie Dunham, aged nearly 71, of Norway, Oxford County, Maine, was being awarded a silver loving cup at Lewiston and was proclaimed the champion old-time fiddler of the state.

A versifier once wrote these immortal lines, inspired by thoughts of the fiddle: Then a note arose in the orchestra The intonings of the agile cat The notes of the noble harp were his. No drum could have inspired such a slight as that.

We get the facts of Mellie Dunham's victory from our excellent contemporary, the Norway Advertiser. We have never yet picked up a copy of the Norway Advertiser without finding in it something worth reading; because it has that quality that comes, and can only come from being true to facts. Big city papers have to miss a good deal that makes small city and town papers interesting; and that is because newspapers, whether printed in cities or towns, have to reflect their communities. Small cities and towns, villages and crossroad hamlets are essentially personal and human. We like the Norway Advertiser.

Mr. Dunham has been playing the fiddle for a good many years; and the fiddle that he played in Lewiston 10 days ago had been played for a good many years before he ever touched it under his chin or held it resting on his knee (which way does he play it)? It is an ancient instrument. It is known to be more than a century old. It is believed to date back to revolutionary days. Many years ago a mouse gnawed one of the "f" holes and made a nest inside, and raised a family there; but it seems not to have damaged the fiddle. Maybe sometimes when Mellie hits a high note, his little finger way up on the E string, the voice of the departed mother mouse comes trembling back, and its ghost speaks out through the strains of the Irish Wash woman or the Sailor's Hornpipe or Money Musk or Turkey in the Straw.

There is no label of Stradivarius or Amati in Mellie's fiddle. Its wood never waited and rested in the soft clime of Cremona. No magic varnish of the Latin world ever spread its magic over its curved surfaces. Kreisel, Elman or Heifetz might smile at its form, cringe at its mouse-gnawed defects. Yet we would like to feel, if we were a fiddle and grown old, that we had a share in the romance of the world as this old fiddle of Mellie Dunham, of Norway, Oxford County, Maine.

We do not know what times M. Dunham played at Lewiston. We surmise that more than 7,000 persons heard him, and that they decided he was the winner in the Pageant of Progress contest. There were 10 or 12 other contestants younger than he. He played old-time jigs. Did he sit on a kitchen chair, perched atop a pine table? Did anyone serve cold cider and doughnuts, between tunes? Was there a big pan full of fall apples? Was there a blazing wood fire in a range? Perhaps some old, tawny-coated dog stretched lazily in the background, in the corner of the room, and heaved his great side up and down, up and down, in the deep sleep that dogs know when they are warm and comfortable, among friends. If there was a range, maybe the cat was curled up under it, nose resting softly on soft paws, sleeping the sleep that misses nothing. The cat ought not to sleep under the stove. Anyone will tell you that a cat sleeping under the stove is liable to fits.

Of course there was no wood range, and there was no cider, no doughnuts or apples or dogs or cats. This was all taking place in a city, in Lewiston, which is sophisticated and modern as all cities have to be nowadays. The contest was in the armory, a big hall, where thousands could and did crowd to listen and applaud. But if Mellie Dunham closed his eyes while he played, and we think he did, he saw all those things; and he smelled the pungent fragrance of wood smoke and the sweet aroma of fresh doughnuts that always dings around farm kitchens. He heard the deep sigh of the dozing old dog in the corner.

As he played the old fiddle tune, "I heard the quick shuffle of feet as the dancers balanced to corners or swung their partners. He heard laughter, and the sallies of young farmer boys and their best girls. He felt the vibrations of a wide-boarded, big-cracked kitchen floor as the men and women capered back and forth across it. He saw the old sink with the polished pans and pump, and a great woodbox, and over at one side a table covered with a red table cloth; and a pile of mail order catalogues and farm notices on it; and a yellow covered almanac hanging up by the window.

So A. Mellie Dunham is the champion fiddler of the state of Maine; and this is a distinction. It means that in him, and through the voice of his fiddle, lives an age of romance and happiness, of laughter and gay times, of success and prosperity; with undertones here and there of the losses and the tragedies that come to country folk. Old, crumbling houses sent ghosts to listen when he played.

The drum may be the ancestor of all instruments. It impels to action. It stirs, irritates, drives, excites, pushes, crowds, maddens. The violin has celestial splendors down from skies unmeasured and links humanity with infinite dreams. But the fiddle ties the hearts of folks to memory.

Mr. Dunham makes snowshoes, too. When Peary made his last and victorious trip to the polar lands, it was Dunham who made the snowshoes. So his shoes have gone into distant and mysterious lands. His workmanship has reached far. Yet we think one old-fashioned dance tune, played on the old mouse-gnawed fiddle, reaches farther.

ABOUT TOWN

The many commendations I have received on account of these rambling notes encourage me to extend them beyond my original purpose. That they are being generally read is quite apparent, though some of the allusions are doubtless not known in the spirit intended, for all do not have a very keen sense of humor or relish the point of a joke.

I've seen one man who objected to the mention of certain individuals because he "amounted to nothing." This led me into a serious reflection. A local newspaper, it is certain, cannot here be successfully maintained which is attempted to be run for a particular class. And who of us, after all, does really "amount to anything?" I once heard a humorous story that will somewhat fit in here. One who had been puffed up with his own importance passed over the Great Divide and appeared before St. Peter at Heaven's gate, and demanded admittance. He was asked what he had done to entitle him to so great a boon—what good he had lived, what of public benefit measures he had helped to promote, and what he had left behind him to remind humanity of his worth. The man confessed and stammered, but finally said that he had belonged to the best class in the community, and shunned those who amounted to nothing. To this the guardian of the gate said, "Those things don't count here," and turning to the attendant, gave this order, "Give him a ticket for his fare and railroad down to h—l."

Misses Abbie Curtis and Lelia Watson are spending their lives in the service of others. They have faithfully labored in the humble position of cooks and house maids for over forty years. Miss Curtis has been many years in the service of Mrs. C. P. Rillon and Miss Watson served in one family fifteen years. There are no better or purer women among us. They are of the very salt of humanity.

Today no subject matter is of more importance than the boys and girls, for upon them depend the future of our country. Some mothers, disregarding the frivolous times and the pleasures of the children, are devoting themselves to the welfare of their children, and such a devoted little mother, worthy of all praise, is Mrs. Annie Sessars of Crescent Street.

Phil Braden is one of our fine young men. For about nine years he was a clerk in the store of Louis J. Brooks. He is a clerk at the Norway Advertiser, and for several weeks has been learning the business in its store here. It is a pleasure to note the success of our worthy young men.

Lester V. Ashton came to Norway from Auburn some twenty-one or two years ago, and entered the Norway Drug Store as clerk. About three years ago he became the proprietor and has successfully run the establishment since. I've never heard the least criticism of him during all these years. He is in every respect worthy of the trust and confidence of the community and a good citizen to have with us.

The affection for each other of Jonathan and David is proverbial and on that of Damon for Pythias, a great and splendid society has been formed. The great friendship and close relations of two of my former favorite teachers, Mrs. Cora Belle Cummings and Miss Gertrude Gardner, is noteworthy. This has existed ever since they have known each other and seems to grow stronger with the years. It is a great satisfaction that I assisted them to obtain their first schools. No better teachers were ever in our schools. They have qualities to be admired and prized. A true faithful and able Miss Gardner is in the discharge of her duties, and how unselfish and what a sweet disposition and how good Cora is. Both are pure gold. Later on I shall mention in one article the teachers and scholars for whom I had great regard and what became of them.

I saw, the other day, a small girl wheeling after her younger sister, Miss Margaret Crooker is a bright little nine year old, whom everyone that knows her is very fond of. Would that there were more like this little lady.

THE MODERN SEVEN WONDERS
The seven wonders of the modern world should be in the same class as the seven wonders of the ancient world. The latter were structures made by man, not discoveries. As a contrast to the Pyramids of Egypt, the Colossus of Rhodes, the Pharos of Alexandria, etc., there should be some massive, or very beautiful works or structures which would always be objects of profound astonishment that man was able to produce them. Anciently, in the field of discovery, were the mariner's compass, the astrolabe, the telescope, the circulation of blood, etc. Wireless, the telephone, the telephone, anesthesia, etc., should be classed with them. Wireless is the only one of them which has not now generally ceased to be wondered at, and this won't long be so from the present indications.

The real seven wonders of the modern world would appropriately seem to be something like these: the Panama Canal, the Key West R. R., the Mt. St. Gotthard Tunnel, the Eiffel Tower, the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor, the Lincoln Memorial Building at Washington, and the Brooklyn bridge. There are some other wonderful works in this same class, among which may be mentioned the great Aswan Dam on the Nile, the Union Pacific among the Rocky Mts., and the subway system of New York City, including the Hudson River tunnel. And it may be noted that these were really more wonderful productions than the magic seven of the ancients, notably the Temple of Karnak at Thebes, the Great Temple of Baalbek and the Great Wall of China.

—C. F. Whitman.

HARRISON

Boy Shoots Bobcat
A huge bobcat, four feet in length, was shot, Saturday, Oct. 24, at South-Harrison, by Andrew Flagg, 17 year old boy, while he was out hunting with his dog. Young Flagg will get the bounty on the bobcat, but the cat is claimed by G. Hartley Pitts, proprietor of the Harrison House, in whose trap it had been caught when Flagg came across it in the woods. The animal's head was so badly shattered by the charge from Flagg's gun that it is unfit for mounting.

The Sunday Telegram

The things that take place Sunday are news on Sunday and irrespective of what they are or where they occur, if they are of interest to Maine people, they will be recorded in The Portland Sunday Telegram.

This is, without doubt, one of the reasons for the rapidly increasing popularity of Maine's own Sunday newspaper, its faithful presentation of all the news of interest to its readers.

Another feature of The Telegram is its thorough covering of Maine school and college sports. In no other Sunday paper is it possible to get so complete a record of these activities.

The Maine colleges enter the second lap of the State series this week and all eyes will be focused on the results. Many important school games are scheduled which will also be watched with a great deal of interest.

If you are not already a reader of The Telegram, become one. Tell your local newsdealer to order a copy for you this week or write us and we will see that you are supplied.
